SAME LEVY BALKAN WAR HOLDS

Increased Valuation Does Not Change 1.2 Mills.

Will Raise $3,373,153 for State

While Kansas this year made a gain of more than 64 million dollars over he assessed valuation of 1912, the in-creased appropriations at the hands of the 1913 legislature compel a tax levy of 1.2 mills, the same as was made last year. The levy will raise $3,373,-153.31 on the 1913 valuation of $2,-

153.31 on the 1913 valuation of $2.811.050,192, as compared with $3,296,280.35 which the state raised by the same levy in 1912 on a valuation of $2,746,900,291. In other words, Kansas will this year pay into the state treasury in state taxes $76,872.96
more than in 1911.

In a table covering the assessed valuations and amount of state taxes to be raised in the 105 counties, the state tax commission makes some startling revelations. Sedgwick county, second largest county in the state in state tax commission makes some startling revelations. Sedgwick county, second largest county in the state in point of population. Is far in the lead of all other counties in property valuation reports. The county is far behind Wyandotte in point of population, yet its property valuation is $115,823.-300, as compared to $113,730,417 in Wyandotte and $85,468,012 in Shawnee. Sedgwick this year made a gain of practically four million over the 1912 valuation.

Shawnee county shows a valuation of $85,468,012, a gain of about four million over 1912, and will this year be compelled to raise $102,561.61 in state taxes. Sedgwick county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and Wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy and wyandotte county will raise $138,987,96 on the 1.2 mill levy an

Second lowest with a valuation of $2.106,252.

The important feature about the showing this year, however, is not the individual gains of the several counties, but the fact that Kansas will be compelled to raise more money to maintain her state institutions than was raised last year. Under a Democratic state administration, the state had been promised a reduction in state taxes. Last year the state had taken a slump of nearly 30 million in her property valuations and with the hopes that this loss would be recovered in the 1913 assessments, the Democrats went still further and promised a reduction in appropriations. The valuations jumped nearly $65 million over last year. You the legislative appropriations went higher than those of the 1911 legislature and this year the state will pay in state taxes nearly $77.000 more than was collected until the 1912 levy.

The valuations in the several counties and the amount of state taxes to be raised in each county is shown in the following table:

Pitcher Reynolds came to the Kaws from the Minneapolis club of the Central Kansas League for a consideration of 400. This is his second year in professional company.
